

iPhone app helps restaurant patrons decide what to order

We've already seen a site that helps food lovers with a specific craving find the restaurant most likely to satisfy it, but recently we came across an effort that takes what may be considered the opposite approach. Specifically, Dish.fm is an iPhone app that helps restaurant patrons zero in on the best-reviewed dishes at any particular restaurant.

Now available for free on Apple's App Store, Dish.fm shows users what is the best dish, drink or dessert to order at any given eatery based on the results of millions of reviews pulled from Yelp, Foursquare and other sites. Photos, reviews and overall ratings are available for each dish, and users can share their own opinions as well by voting for the dishes they like. The video below explains the premise in more detail.

Created by Farminers Invest, which is based in the British Virgin Islands, Dish.fm currently focuses on San Francisco and New York, but other US and European cities will be added soon, the company says. App-minded entrepreneurs: one to get involved in?
