

Innovation > Work & Lifestyle > Dating site for singles who can't have sex

DATING SITE FOR SINGLES WHO CAN'T HAVE SEX

 WORK & LIFESTYLE

2date4love is a dating service targeted toward cancer survivors and others who are looking for love without sexual intercourse.

For some, illnesses, disabilities or even medical treatments can make sex an impossibility. That's where 2date4love comes in, with a dating service targeted toward cancer survivors and others who are looking for love without sexual intercourse. California-based 2date4love was founded by Laura Brashier, a cervical cancer survivor whose own radiation treatments left her unable to have sex. In response to the problems that this caused in traditional dating situations, Brashier last month launched 2date4love to help herself and others "find the lasting love we all desire and deserve," in the site's own words. Users of 2date4love can enjoy a one-month free trial of the service. After that, pricing will reportedly range from USD 28.95 to USD 49.95 per month, depending on the service level and duration required. As with many of the stories featured on our virtual pages over the years, often the best source of inspiration for a startup can come from personal experience. Time to look at your personal experiences and create a meaningful solution for others? Spotted by: Murtaza Patel

21st September 2011

Email: info@2date4love.com

Website: www.2date4love.com