

Tsao sources his ropes from climbing gyms | Photo source Rocks2Dogs

Innovation > Sustainability > New dog leads made from old climbing ropes

NEW DOG LEADS MADE FROM OLD CLIMBING ROPES

 SUSTAINABILITY

A teen has created a non-profit business to repurpose old climbing rope and help animal rescue shelters

Register for full access

Our library content is no longer freely available. Please register to gain access to more than 12,000 innovations, updated daily. Our content is global in scope and covers solutions to the world's biggest challenges across 18 sectors.

REGISTER

SIGN IN

26th August 2021

Website: rocks2dogs.org

Contact: rocks2dogs.org/contact-us

Download PDF

Takeaway:

The leashes come in a wide variety of lengths and designs and cost just $14.99 (€11) each. Making the leashes and running the business is a full-time job, so Tsao had to recruit friends and family to help out so he would have enough time for school and homework. Not bad for a 16-year-old. This is also exactly the type of innovative idea that the world is going to need more of reduce our use of carbon and improve sustainability. It also demonstrates the point of life is too small to apply sustainable principles to.

SIGN IN